OVERVIEW

Joy Lopez is a low-voltage systems designer and project manager with more than 10 years of experience in physical security systems, construction and operations, and project management. She provides leadership to security management teams to ensure that procedure, execution of project installation, and practices are in accordance with client goals and standards. Ms. Lopez is responsible for management and coordination helping to establish and implement security goals, objectives, policies, and operating procedures.

Prior to joining Guidepost, she was a program manager, assisting with bids and proposals, and vendor and subcontractor oversight. Ms. Lopez has extensive in-field experience supervising complex security systems installation, provides first-hand knowledge that supports contractor installation of systems throughout the construction process. This experience ensures that a fully functional and operational system is delivered to the client following final systems commissioning and sign-off.
